SHIPPING REPORTS.

(From the Daily Shipping & Commercial News.)

THE British barque New York has been ashore the last 3 days abreast of Woosung. The Shandon has made some attempts to get her off at high water but unsuccessfully. A China Pilot put her a-bore.

TIENTSIN.—On the 23d Aug., the captain of the Sea Witch was proceeding out from Taku to his ship in the Outer Roads with his Ship's papers, letters, &c., in his own Boat it came on to blow rather fresh, when about half way out to his ship the boat capsized and he lost one man, the ship's papers, letters, &c., which detained his departure until the 25th.

The French barque Vallée de Luz, Capt. Laffite, after a quick passage of 55 hours from Nagasaki, arrived at the Saddles in the evening of the 12th inst., after which she stood in for the Light Ship until 1 o'clock in the morning, when she struck on a bank about 12 miles from Gutzlaff, and in spite of all endeavours made to get her off, remained there until 3 o'clock on Friday, when the water flooded the decks and the crew left her in the Boats, taking refuge on board the French barque Chene bound to Chefoo. A boat had been despatched to Woosung from the wreck soon after she struck in search of assistance, and on Sunday afternoon arrived in time to save part of the masts, rigging, and sails of the ship, and took off those of the crew and passenger from on board the Chene and arrived here by the French Str. Hongkong on Monday morning. Ship and cargo are totally lost after a good deal had been stolen by piratical junks.

H. M. Gun-boat Flamer returned September 18th, after a diligent but unsuccessful search for some reliable information respecting the fate of Mr. Ayers the pilot, who it is feared was lost in the late gale. The Flamer visited the various groups of islands in Hangchow Bay and at the entrance of the river Yang-tsze, the inhabitants of which were closely questioned, but without eliciting any trace of Mr. Ayers or the boat.

The British barque Malakoff, Milne, Master, belonging to Calcutta, foundered at sea on 8th Sept., 1861, in Lat. 20.17 North, Long 125 51 East. The Malakoff had been dismasted in a Typhoon and was abandoned when she foundered. The master and family, together with the mates and entire crew, were saved by the Schooner Shanghai; the Lascar portion were left at Ningpo and the Europeans have been brought on to this Port. The Schooner Shanghai also suffered greatly in the late gales and has lost her masts.

NINGPO, September 12th, 1861.

Per Chinese Str. Maria, Geale, Master.—Left Foochow on the 28th August; anchored at Quan-tow with a falling barometer. Left again on the 30th, and got as far as Ragged Point, bar: falling fast. Bore up for Tinghai anchorage; anchored at 1 P.M. on the 30th, wind N.W. by W. blowing a fresh breeze. Wind continued in the same quarter until 4 A.M. of 31st, when it commenced to blow a hard gale at N.W. At noon, wind moderate, and bar: rose one-tenth: wind veering round to the North and East, blowing a hard gale with double reefsail at 1.30 P.M. until it came out at E. by N. when it blew a complete hurricane. Bar. 28.80 at 3 P.M. Ship labouring and riding heavy at her anchors, cut away the foremast, two anchors down with 100 fms. on one chain and 70 fms. on the other, and steaming ahead full power for 7 hours. Midnight, barometer coming up; ship riding fine. Lat. of Tinghai 29.16 North, Long. 119.54 East. Course and Distance from Kelung to Tinghai, N.W. by W. 123 miles.

Per French brig Perseverant, Douce, Master, from Kelung, in Formosa.—August 20th, wind N.W. to W. with drizzling rain, barometer falling. Morning of the 30th, wind N. to N.E., blowing a hard gale; noon, French bar: 732, very low, wind hauling to the S.W. when it blew a heavy typhoon, and continued until 8 P.M. Bar: rising at daylight next morning, wind back to N.W., moderate weather and clearing up. The vessels in Kelung at the time were—the British ship Allison, British barque, Whampoa, Prussian Brig Typhoon, French Brig Perseverant, and a Dutch barque name unknown. The Allison, totally wrecked; hull and cargo sold for about $2,000, master and crew to proceed to Shanghai in the Whampoa, to leave about the 5th Sept. The brig Perseverant had light North winds from Kelung to Ningpo, and was eight days on the passage.

NOTIFICATION.

BRITISH CONSULATE,
KIUKIANG, 12th September, 1861.

The annexed extract from a despatch, dated Peking, 17th August, from Her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the address of the undersigned, is hereby published for general information.

P. J. HUGHES,
H.B.M.'s Vice Consul, at Kiukiang.

To the British Residents at Klukiang.

Extract.

"It is evident that if we are to trade in the "Yangtsze River without being involved in the "civil contest now raging on its banks, we must "proceed with the greatest caution, and I am "convinced that the privilege will prove a mis-"fortune instead of an advantage unless the trade "be confined within the legitimate limits of "foreign imports and exports.

"I wish it to be clearly understood that I will "not interfere in behalf of any vessel employed "in local trading on the river, whether to points "occupied by the Imperialists or by the Rebels. "Any such trade must be conducted at the risk "of the parties undertaking it and does not receive "my sanction or support."

THE London mail of 10th August, due in Hongkong on the 22nd and here on the 20th Sept. Last year it arrived on the 26th per Formosa.

THE P. & O. Co.'s steamer with the next Mail for Europe will leave to-morrow at day-light.

WE invite attention to the interesting translations which appear in to-day's issue. They record the demise of the late Emperor HIEN-FUNG, and the accession of his eldest son TSAE CH'UN under the felicitous Title of K'I SIANG, the meaning of which, as the Chinese understand it, is scarcely done justice to by its English version "Good Fortune." The Reigning Emperor is the eighth of the line that has ascended the Throne of China, although the family reckon back one or two generations further as actually entitled to Imperial Honor. Whether he will be the last of his Race to hold that distinguished seat, is a question, the solution of which may well puzzle the most astute observer of Chinese politics. Being but a child, for he is only nine, he certainly claims many sympathies and good wishes, and indeed there is in the very fact every ground of hope both for himself and his distressed dominions; for the Council of Regency, in whose charge his father has so confidingly placed him, are all men of position and influence, and surely among so many and such powerful persons, there must be one individual or a party, who are prepared to guide the vessel of state with more decision and energy than have been applied to its conduct for two Reigns past, and who have the wisdom to see, wherein lies the policy that will carry them safely through the critical circumstances under which they accepted their trust. We are neither Imperialists nor Rebels in our predilections. Our hopes are simply in favour of what Western natives want, namely, a peaceful and commercial China; and this, alas, we cannot see looming in the distance, so long as the country is either ruled by the lax, listless, exclusive Tartars, or racked by the ravaging, cruel Taepings. It is therefore with pleasure that we observe in the Last Testament of the dying HIEN FUNG a kindly reference to the peaceful relations with Foreign nations, which he gives credit to PRINCE KUNG for having effected, ere the Reign approached its close, as also amongst the Decrees of the new Sovereign a notice of his intention to visit Peking for the purpose of performing the requisite rites due to his father's remains. These two declarations tell at any rate that foreign relations are recognised by the Tartar Throne, and that its occupant is not timid of placing himself within the reach of diplomatic access, should the Foreign ministers at Peking think fit to avail themselves of the opportunity. In the event of their courtesies being accepted, of which we have little doubt, if proper tact and caution be used, an opening will be given to that amicable intercourse with Foreign countries, and that healthy contact with the foreign element, which we are convinced will go far to strengthen the reigning Dynasty, by discovering to it its weaknesses and its faults, and presenting to it their readiest cure, a participation in the civilization and progress of the West. These are alone needed to make the Chinese a thriving people. Their love of peace and desire for trade only want a liberal and just administration to render these certain aids towards placing China high among the nations both in a commercial and a political point of view. As for the Rebels worthy and patriotic though their alleged object be, not only are they not moving one step towards its fulfilment, but they are positively destroying the people and interests they profess to save; and their suicidal mismanagement is, so far as we know, weakening them to that extent, that, spite of their slight successes here and there, they cannot maintain the footing which their first prowess gained them; and, if they do not soon recover themselves, the desolation and want, which their own acts have brought about, will prove more useful adjuncts to their enemies the Tartars, than all the vaunted power and bravery which these latter pride themselves upon. The rebels must change their tactics and their policy, ere any well-wisher to China, or any one interested in its trade, can desire to see them masters of its many millions. It is a trite but true saying, "Do not throw away your dirty water until you get your clean." The Tartar Dynasty is not a perfect one, it is true, but it is the best administrative power we have at present, and until a better takes its place, it is the wisdom of foreign nations to bear with its shortcomings, and to help it to correct its faults.

FOR sometime past the northern section of this Settlement—erroneously termed the American Concession—has been notorious for the state of social anarchy which prevails amongst its lower class of inhabitants, especially that quarter popularly denominated "Bamboo Town." Here, the stranger in a stroll through our embryo metropolis, unwittingly enters a den of thieves, robbers, and murderers; so that it is unsafe to pass along its squalid lanes and streets, even at noon day. Numerous robberies are committed weekly, if not daily, and the unfortunate victims maltreated by the desperadoes who infest its filthy habitations, without the offenders being captured and punished. It would appear that the moment any person comes within its precincts, no matter whether a Chinese or a Foreigner, if he be a stranger he is a marked man, and the odds are ten to one that he does not escape from its haunts without being attacked or robbed; and should he endeavour to seize the culprit, he is immediately pounced upon by the inhabitants—who rush out of their houses, like a nest of hornets—threatening his life, if he shows fight, while the culprit or culprits escape. Thus have we within a few hundreds yards of our peaceful streets, a Shanghai Alsatia, inhabited by a band of roistering bravoes, leagued together for evil purposes—a community of unconvicted, or escaped felons—a nest of land pirates thirsting after, and living by crime; and who defy, with the utmost impunity, the foreign laws which govern the Settlement.

But perhaps the most extraordinary fact connected with the people inhabiting this quarter, is, that the leaders, if not the greater portion of these banditti, are runaway sailors and deserters,, English, French, American, Portuguese, Manilamen and indeed men of all nations, who have no right to be resident here at all; and who are there solely for the purpose of robbing and assaulting the industrious and peaceable inhabitants. It is true that they have associates among the Chinese inhabiting that quarter, but these are not the chief delinquents. The instigators to almost every outrage are principally foreign desperadoes. These villains have been known to lie in wait at the end of the bridge leading to this lawless locality, and with firearms and daggers, pounce upon any luckless fellow, who may have to pass that way. So dangerous and disgusting is that spot, that foreign ladies in their chairs or on foot have avoided it for more than a year, and even on horseback all are wary in riding across the bridge. After nightfall many passers-by have been shot at, and several wounded, especially since the discontinuance of the local police force, after the death of their inspector, Captain ST NE. This small body of men, although insufficient for the requirements of that quarter—which may be designated the North Division of the Foreign Settlement at Shanghai—yet gave some protection to the residents. But now that it has been disbanded, the community is entirely at the mercy of these gangs of ruffians who sally forth at night armed with guns and pistols—as they did on the evening of last Tuesday—killing and wounding some of our own countrymen who unfortunately had fallen into their clutches.

From the most reliable account of the fatal affray, we learn that some liberty was taken by H.M.S. Scout, had gone on shore and crossed over the Soochow Creek Bridge at the back part of the settlement, where some Manilamen attempted to rob one of the marines—who resented the attempt by collaring the thief, which brought a host of these ruffians to the rescue, armed with pistols, swords, and knives. They then used freely, and the party of Englishmen being unarmed, had to take shelter in a drinking house. A policeman from the Consulate, who happened to be one of the party, "run the gauntlet" of the armed crowd, but not before three shots were fired at him—luckily without effect. He got on board the Scout, when the Captain at once dispatched a body of Marines to succour their comrades, in charge of a Lieutenant, who, on reaching the scene of the affray, were instantly attacked by fifty or sixty desperadoes, all armed, besides being fired upon from the windows. In self-defence they were obliged to return the fire which dispersed the ruffians. Captain Corbett of the Scout, learning the serious dimensions the affray had assumed, landed with a strong party, but met no opposition, and succeeded in picking up six or seven of his men who said that "the mob had been endeavouring to get at them like hungry wolves." After they had crossed the bridge, one of the Marines, who foolishly ventured back to the American side without the knowledge of the Captain, was shot in the groin, which passed right through him, and he is now in a most precarious state. As to the number of killed and wounded on both sides, it is a difficult matter to ascertain. So far as we know, it comprises—one European dead; one marine wounded seriously; one ditto not expected to live; three Chinamen, dead; two Manilamen, dead; four or five Europeans, eight or ten Chinamen, and about the same number of the ruffians wounded or contused.

The question now arises, what is to be done in this emergency? How shall this horde of banditti be dealt with, as the Settlement cleared of their presence. The only way is to make a razzia upon the quarter that breeds this pest, secure all the foreigners and doubtful characters, and having handed these over to the Taoutai for punishment, raze every house to the ground suspected of harbouring them. If the Taoutai will not what he ought to do, he should sanction a course of this kind at once, as that question is under his special charge. We have no doubt that the Consuls of the Treaty Powers will unanimously aid him in this course of action; and we believe that Captain Corbett of the Scout, will undertake to support him with force if requisite. As to the future organization of a police to protect this northern division of the Settlement, that will form a subject for after-consideration. It is rumoured that an application has been forwarded to the Municipal Council on the subject, and we shall be glad to learn that this fatal affray has at least had the effect of creating a force there, for the establishment of order and the protection of life and property.

OUR old and familiar friend the steamship Yang-tsze, arrived here on the 18th with mails from India only—all that we are destined to receive by this opportunity. By her, we learn that on the 7th inst., the American flag, which she has so successfully borne since she was built, was hauled down, and the British Ensign hoisted in its stead, when her well-known, and highly esteemed commander, Capt. Dearborn, struck his flag, and resigned his trust into the hands of his Chief Officer, Mr. Hardy, who now commands her. It is most painful to be forced to say "farewell" to an old and valued friend, but we cannot allow Capt. Dearborn to take his departure from us without a parting "God speed you."

This successful shipmaster, we learn, left for Southampton, on the 12th inst.

All who have travelled with Capt. Dearborn will acknowledge the kindness and courtesy which it was his wont to shew to every one. Our thanks, however, are due to Capt. Dearborn, on a much wider grounds. The public of Shanghai is grateful to a Commander who, by his perseverance and punctuality, aided by the liberality of the owners of the Yang-tsze, Messrs Dent & Co., to whom it is unnecessary to speak here, has enabled us to obtain our letters and papers generally two days in advance of the P. & O. Company. For three months in succession, we believe, has this gallant vessel been known to be the bearer of letters to many an anxious soul.

We sincerely trust that Dearborn's mantle will fall on Hardy's shoulders.

LAST DECREE OR PUBLIC TESTAMENT OF THE LATE, AND MANIFESTOES OF THE NEW EMPEROR OF CHINA.

In the Peking Gazette of the 23rd Augt. are the following:—

AUTOGRAPH DECREE:

"Let Tsai Ch'un the eldest son of the Emperor be Heir Apparent. A Decree Extraordinary."

AUTOGRAPH DECREE:

"Our eldest son, Tsai Ch'un, being now constituted Heir Apparent, let Tsai Yuen, Twanhwa, Kingshi'ou, Sushun, Muyin, Kw'ang Yuen, Tu Hau, and Chiau Yu-ying, with all their might aid him as Counsellors in all things pertaining to the Administration of Government. A Decree Extraordinary."

Tsai Yuen, Prince of I, as the prefix Tsai shews, is of the Imperial House, in the same generation as the Crown Prince.

Twanhwa, Prince of Ching, Commander-in-Chief of the Gendarmerie of Peking, elder brother of Sushun.

Kingsh'ou, husband of the 6th of the aunts of the Heir Apparent.

Sushun, one of the two junior members of the Grand Secretariat.

Muyin, the Prince of I's colleague as Commissioner at T'ung Chow, 1860; a President of the Board of War.

Kw'ang Yuen, a Chinese, sometime in the Great Council; a Vice-President.

Tu Han, Vice-President of the Board of Civil Office, son of Tu Shau-tien, tutor to the Emperor.

Tsiau Yu-ying, Vice-President of one of the lower Courts.

In the M. S. Edition of the 24th Augt., it appears that a courier with a despatch marked "at the highest rate of speed," (600 li and more a day) arrived this day. The paper proved to contain the late Emperor's testament, or the manifesto left behind His late Majesty, who ascended on the Dragon to be a Guest on high, on the 17th day (22nd August) in the hoary period yin (3 to 5 A.M.)

LAST DECREE OR PUBLIC TESTAMENT OF THE LATE EMPEROR.

On the 17th day of the 7th moon of the 11th year of the reign of Hien Fung (22nd August, 1861), the Nui-Koh, or Grand Secretariat, received the following Decree:—

"Already grateful for the disinterested affection with which His late MAJESTY, CANONISED as the PERFECT, had covered Us as with a canopy and nourished Us, We received the trust He of His Goodness [to Us,] and of His care [for the empire,] committed to our keeping in humble accordance with the commands reiterated to Us by the SAINTED ONE, namely, that We should regard as fixed principles, a devout fear of HEAVEN, the imitation of OUR ANCESTORS, diligent attention to government, and love for the people; a respectful recognition of the three [symbols of] unselfishness (1); the maintenance of peace, and restraint of self-sufficiency;—as soon as We had come (2) to the highest place (se., the throne), We commanded Our servants to recommend Us men of worth and ability; We widened the path of words, so that all Our servants, great or small, (3) might set forth each one his opinions; it being Our hope that so We might have the larger choice of counsel, and be informed of all things, the feelings of Our people (lit., those below,) not being either hidden from Us. And from the time of Our accession until now, eleven years, We have given daily attention to the more than myriad [matters of state]. Ourself opening and perusing all documents submitted to Us, giving audience to Our servants presented, We have idled not, were it ever so little, a single day. Nor have We failed in any case that the chief (Chih Li) or any other of the provinces has been visited by drought or flood, and that application has been made to Us by its governor-general or governor, immediately to shower Our bounteous consideration upon its people, pained in thought for their distress.

But it is now over ten years since war broke out, and although the large bodies of rebels who had worked their way into positions at Lien-chin and Fung-kwan Yun (4), as well as those of Hu Kwang, Fuh Kien, the Kwang Provinces, and Kwei Chau, have been by repeated [blows] extirpated, peace is not yet restored to the Provinces of Kiang Su, Nean Hwui, and Cheh Kiang; these are disturbed by rebels in various districts.

Constant reflection upon the suffering of our own (5) black-haired people, exposed time after time to the flame of war [as tormented (lit., scorched) and worn Us early and late; We could neither sleep nor eat in comfort; and thus, at last, Our bodily strength has waxed weak from the wound that over-anxiety inflicted on Our spirits.

After Our Autumnal Hunting Tour of last year, We halted (or, abode) at Jé Ho; [but] Yih Sin, Prince of Kung, and his colleagues, having presently placed all things essential to foreign trade on a satisfactory footing (6), there was peace, as in ordinary times, within and without the capital, and We had issued a decree in the first moon of this year, [declaring] that in the middle moon of spring Our chariot should return to the city, there to discourse with the princes and ministers upon [measures affecting] the government of the people, that each might be given effect to in its own turn. Ever since the beginning of this summer, however, [We have been suffering from] a violent dysentery, long continuance of which has induced such an increase of debility, that We had at last too little strength left to rise. Could this but be [the will of] Heaven? [We did not repine,] yet, feeling that a trust so weighty as that of the divine vessel should be committed to the charge of the eldest and the best (7), in the i. watch, (about midnight) of the 16th day (21st August) We called before Us the President of the Clan Court, the Junior Vice-President of the same, the Ministers of the Presence, and the Members of the Great Council, and commanded them to write Our decree in vermilion (8), whereby Our eldest son is constituted Heir Apparent, and these (or all) Ministers are commanded to support him with all their hearts, and to aid him in governing with their counsel.

The Heir Apparent is humane (9) and dutiful, quick and intelligent. He will not fail to respect the charge entrusted to him. Let him straightway ascend the throne and continue the Imperial line.

"It is said in the Classic of History, '[A ruler] should know mankind, should comfort his people' (10)." At this moment, in the eastern and southern provinces, military operations are not attended with success, and they of the hundred surnames (the people) are scattered far from their homes, suffering pitibably the [horrors] incidental to war. Foremost then among [Our son's] obligations at this crisis, is the awakening of [men from their present torpor to] the study of letters, the repair (or, reform) of the apparatus of war (11); the patronage of worth and ability; and the extermination of the hideous multitude. Can he but exert himself to discharge them?

"Let the princes and ministers who form Our suite here, and the princes and ministers now in the capital, with pure heart, and in friendly concert, unite to aid [Our son], that so his administration may improve until it attain perfection.

"The high officers commanding forces in the field in different parts of the empire, the generals commanding Manchu garrisons, the governors-general and governors of provinces, have received largely of Our favour. Great is the obligation upon them to sweep [sedition] clean away, to exterminate utterly (lit., paring close) the pest of rebellion, and by giving tranquillity to the empire (12) and repose to the black-haired people, effect the object We leave unaccomplished, and thus in some degree console the spirit that will be in heaven (13).

Let [this Decree] be published to the Empire for the information of all men.

(1) Confucius in the Book of Rites, (Li Ki,) is represented saying, that a sovereign, to make his people work as they ought, should himself observe the three modes of unselfishness, to wit: that of heaven, which overshadows not for itself; that of earth, which grows not for itself; and that of the sun and moon, whose light is shed not for themselves.

(2) Come, se., come imperially, the verb yih, originally to drive a carriage, is now proper to acts of the emperor.

(3) That is, the lowest who may address the throne. A judge, for instance, in the provinces, may memorialise: an intendant (tâu-tai), who is of the next grade below him, may not, unless he happen to bear the title of judge by brevet; which he may do honorarily, or, in some few instances, ex officio.

(4) The Tai-ping rebels who pushed as far as Tien-tsing, in 1853, and were eventually destroyed north of the Yellow River 1855.

(5) The Emperor here drops the imperial pronoun of the first person.

(6) Lit., all things essential to commerce with the different nations.

(7) The passage is classical, and the meaning of the characters disputed; some rendering eldest and best, humane and virtuous. The commentaries most in vogue under the reigning dynasty favor the version adopted in this translation.

(8) Vermilion (tsin,) is ordinarily synonymous with Autograph. It is remarkable that the two Decrees here mentioned as having been dictated, do not conclude with the form which we usually translate Respect this (more properly "By the act of the Emperor, this"),—but with the words t'é yih, Decree Extraordinary.

(9) Humane (jin,) may be rendered benevolent, philanthropic; often, self-sacrificing, or disinterested; by various terms, in short, expressive of a recognition of our duty to our neighbour.

(10) Shu King, Book I, sqn. 4. The words quoted are from a passage of great interest, as being the earliest enunciation of the conditions under which alone the empire can be well governed and happy. This will be only when the emperor is himself virtuous, and his own family well ordered. Enlightened men will then encourage him and combine to aid him, and no problem in government will be beyond the reach of solution.

This is the counsel of Kâu Yâu to his sovereign Ta Yü, the Deucalion of China, in whose favor Shun had abdicated, B.C. 2169, and is summed up in the words of the text, "Yes! [the secret is] the knowledge of men, the giving comfort to the people."

Yü reminds his minister that even the patriarchal monarch Yâu, Shun's predecessor, had found this hard to attain.

(11) This is very literal. We should say, stir up, or educate, the civil, and re-organise the military establishment.

(12) [All within the] horizon [and under the] canopy [of heaven]

(13) The material heaven. The t'ien stands like any other word in the column. The t'ien translated HEAVEN near the beginning of the document, with the other words in small capitals, stand as high above the column as the law in such things will allow.

DECREES [OF THE NEW EMPEROR], 24TH AUGUST.

1. "Let Jinshan, Prince of Jui, Itao, Prince of Yü, Yih Sin, Prince of Kung, Yih Hwan, Prince of Ch'un, Chau Tsu-pei, a senior member of the Grand Secretariat, Sushun, a junior member of the Grand Secretariat, Tsiaenking, a President of the Board of War, Chin Fou-ngan, of the Board of Civil office, and Miensan, of the Colonial Office, with Tu Han, Vice President of the Board of Civil Office, attend with all solemnity to the celebration of the obsequies, [of his late Majesty].

"Let Chin Fou-ngan on receipt of this decree, travel night and day to our presence, there to remain.

"Let Itao, Prince of Yü, Yih Sin Prince of Kung, Chau Tsu-pei, and Tsiuen-king make all the necessary arrangements in the capital. There is no need for them to appear before Us here. Respect this!"

2. "Let Luan'ai, Yang Ch'un, and Li Teh-li [members of the Medical Department] be deprived of their buttons and sashes."

Itao, Prince of Yü, is head of one of the eight families in which the right to the Crown remains. Twanhwa, Prince of Ching, is another. Tsai Yuen, Prince of I, though a branch of the Imperial stem, is not. Yih Hwan is a younger brother of the Prince of Kung.

3. IMPERIAL MANIFESTO ANNOUNCING THE DEATH OF THE LATE AND ACCESSION OF THE PRESENT EMPEROR.

"We had been the object of His Majesty the late Emperor's great bounty, than which High Heaven is not more infinite. He fed and watched Us. And the years of the Sainted One being but just past thirty, as We waited on Him in the palace, Our love for Him increasing day by day, [it was our hope that] He might count upon a century.

"Last summer it chanced that he was affected with a cough and expectoration, but under medical treatment He recovered, and after the Imperial Tour to Lwan Yang (Jé Ho) in the autumn, the person of the Sainted One was as well (as much at ease) and strong as formerly. But the continued disorders of the provinces occasioned by the pestilence of rebellion gave Him anxiety by night and by day; and, in the spring of this year, a cold He had caught (or a chill to which He was exposed) caused His malady to break out afresh, while in the sixth moon He was attacked by a dysentery, which by degrees so reduced his strength, that in the 16th day of this moon, He made an effort, ill as He was, to summon before Him Tsai Yuen, Twanhwa, Kingshan, Sushun, Muyin, Kw'ang Yuen, Tu Han, and Chiau Yu-ying, and gave them a special command to write for Him a Decree in the Vermilion Pencil, constituting Us Hwang Tai Tsz' (Heir Apparent).

"With bitter tears We received His Commands, grieving and anxious, trembling and awe-struck. We hoped that the Person of the Affectionate One might yet be saved, and that for long We should continue to receive His gracious commands. But after We had in person been informed of the Will of Him that regarded Us fondly, His malady attacked Him with increasing violence; bringing Him presently to the last extremity, and on the 17th day in the yin watch (3 to 5 A.M.) He sped upwards upon the Dragon to be a guest on high. We tore the earth and cried to Heaven, yet reached We not to Him with Our hand or voice.

"With reverence We call to mind that His late Majesty during the eleven years that He sat upon the throne, with earnest zeal, with painful solicitude, [so toiled that] He rested little amid the more than myriad [affairs that demanded His attention]; that on no day did He fail in shewing respect to Heaven, or in following in practice the example of His Ancestors. Diligence in His administration of the State, love of His people, were His chief consideration. He remitted taxes, or gave time for their collection. He chose men of ability. In everything that concerned the policy of the empire or the well-being of the people, the Sacred One was ever unceasingly forethoughtful. Of all that have blood and breath there can be none that is not most sincerely afflicted [at his death]. Our own tears are as of blood. We beat Our breast [in anguish]. Can We yet bear to speak of it? We are mindful, however, that as regards the discharge of that most important trust laid upon Our insignificant Self, We may yet rely upon the unswerving fidelity of all Our servants, in the capital or without it, civil or military, be their degree high or low, who will aid Us in the work of government.

"It will more than ever behove the high officers conducting military operations, to enforce with strictness the rules of their service, and with speed to put an end to the pestilence of rebellion.

"The governors-general and governors of Chih Li and other provinces must on their part comfort the people and make them contented; that so they may, as they look upward to Him, console the Spirit, now in Heaven, of His late Majesty. This is our earnest hope.

"Touching the observances of burial and mourning, the last Decree of His late Majesty, which we have with reverence received, ordains that, as of old prescribed, the mourning shall end in 27 days. Our heart cannot indeed allow that this should be. It will be Our duty, in devout conformity with the ancient limitation, to mourn solemnly for three years, that the sincerity of Our babe-like affection may be in some degree satisfied.

"And whereas the great solemnities of sacrificing to Heaven and Earth, and in the [Nine] Temples, may not assuredly be modified because of the general (or state) mourning, We command the several Courts [whom it concerns] to make search for precedents, and after deliberation, to inform Us concerning the delegation of officers to perform particular ceremonies, and of Our own attendance at and celebration of the proper rites.

"Let the officers and people of the empire adhere to the habit of mourning by law prescribed.

"Let these Our commands be made known to all in the capital and the provinces. Respect this!"

4. His Majesty raises the Empress of the late Emperor, and I, the lady of the harem who bore him, both to the rank of Empress Dowager.

5. This cites a Decree of 1846, regulating the alteration to be made in the second character of the proper name of the prince, now Emperor. His name is 載淳 Tsai Ch'un, and the latter character will henceforth be written 湻; an old form of it. The other it becomes illegal to use.

6. This instructs the Princes and Ministers commissioned to superintend the funeral rites, to make the necessary preparations for the reception of the late Emperor's coffin, which it will be the duty of the present Emperor to accompany to Peking, where, after having been brought into the Palace, it will be carried to the Kwan Teh Tien, a chapel on Prospect Hill, there to rest [until the time, to be chosen by lot, for its transference to the Mausoleum east of the city].

The Governor-General of Chih Li will see to the construction of the rush chapels, [at which the coffin must rest], and the repair of the roads and bridges this side of Ku-peh K'au, the pass in the Great Wall through which runs the road to Jé Ho; and he and the General of Nomads at Jé Ho to those north of the same pass.

In the Gazette of the 26th August are further decrees.

1. Citing Decrees of the last years of the reigns Kisking and Tâu Kwang (1820 and 1850), prohibits the return of the chief civil and military provincials to Peking to prostrate themselves before the coffin. The late Emperor, as he was dying, gave orders that, as his coffin returned to Peking, the tu-tung (Banner-General) of Jé Ho and the Governor-General of Chih Li were to come to Jé Ho salute the coffin, but prohibited all others, even officers of the Chih Li establishment. The war is the reason given, and the high authorities should now prosecute this with vigour.

2. Excuses prostration to various uncles of the present Emperor, the Prince of Kung among the rest. The late Emperor had extended the same favour to his uncle the Prince of Hwui. On state occasions of course all will kotow.

Since the above were translated, the usual Decree has been received commanding the proper authorities to select a posthumous title of honor for the deceased Emperor. His father whose reign was styled Tâu Kwang, is now always spoken of as Ch'ing Hwang Ti, His Majesty the Perfect, this being one of a set of words appointed by statute for the glorification of the departed monarchs of the Dynasty. Widely as differs the public verdict respecting the conduct on the throne of father and son, the Decree now issued assigns to the latter nearly all the virtues the corresponding document, issued on his accession in 1850, ascribed to his predecessor. He was devout, filial, loved his people, invited admonition, rewarded good counsel, transacted his own business, kept the official establishment in hand, set a good example in his economy, and promoted the study of true philosophy. He sent forth armies to fight the rebels; he assisted the people suffering from drought or flood; he authorised the coast carriage of grain by sea, when the canal transport was interrupted. The great feat of his reign was, however, the repulse of the rebels in their northern expedition of 1853 55.

The reign Hien Fung, Universal Plenteousness, will terminate at the end of this, its 11th year, on the 20th January, 1862. The style of the new reign is announced to be 祺祥 K'i-siang (in Peking, Ch'i-hsiang), which may be rendered Good Fortune.

LATER NEWS FROM EUROPE AND AMERICA.

ALTHOUGH the bi-monthly Mail due on the 14th inst., has not yet arrived, we are in receipt of one week's later news from England vid India, brought from Hongkong by the Yang-tsz'. On the authority of the London and China Telegraph, we have the satisfaction of learning that the bi-monthly Mail is to be continued, but with an increased postal rate on letters of 1*s.* per half-ounce, instead of 6*d.* We shall all be thankful for the renewal of the subsidy to the P. and O. Company but, we cannot help remarking that it is rather a scurvy way of raising the money.

The general news from Europe maintain the pacific tone of the previous week, with advices by telegraph from London to the 18th July. No political events of importance had transpired during the intervening seven days, but the social world has been startled by the occurrence of apalling crimes, committed in the upper circles of life in England and on the Continent. Lord John Russell is to obtain the reward of his services to the state, by his elevation to the peerage as Lord Ludlow, which may affect the construction of the Cabinet; while other ministerial changes are in progress. M. Mires and his partner Solar have been found guilty and condemned to be imprisoned for five years, and to pay a fine of three thousand francs. Lieutenant Allen had brought an action against the Duke of Cambridge and obtained £2,000 damages. The Monetary and Commercial intelligence from London, reports a general steadiness in all branches of business. The Money Market was easier; Bank rate still at 6 per cent; Share Markets quiet, and Consols firm at 89¾ to 90 for money, and 90 to 90¼ for the account. The Produce Markets generally shewed more steadiness. Tea steady but quiet; Silk nominal, and Cotton very firm with higher rates. The Manchester Market, shewed a tendency to rise, and some considerable business doing for the East. The Great Eastern had arrived safely at Quebec on the 6th July.

The news from America by telegraph contain President Lincoln's message, which is of a strongly warlike character. It calls on Congress for four hundred thousand men, and four hundred millions of dollars, to maintain the dignity of the State, and secure the bond of Union which is now threatened to be severed. The language of the New York press towards England has apparently not yet reached its culminating point, for it is even more rabid than before. Nothing will satisfy these paper-warriors, but exterminating the Dominion of Britain on the high seas, and calling upon all loyal Americans to "drive the British power out of Canada," which would have the effect (they opine) of uniting North and South again in the bonds of brotherhood; and be the means of thrashing "perfidious Albion" We refrain from comment on such windbag writing, as we are perfectly certain that no sensible citizen of the American States can sympathise with such vile opinions. Accounts from the border states, contain the intelligence that a small fight had taken place in Western Virginia between the belligerents, which may be called a "Free Fight," where the rebellions southerns got a thrashing. A greater fight was expected to take place soon, as large bodies of Federal troops were crossing the Potomac.

(From our Chinese Correspondent.)

ON the 8th instant, the Ping-hu and Cha-pû rebels by two routes attacked Chin-shan and Chang-yen, and being in great force the Governor dispatched 100 militia to Feng-hsien to protect the place—Chin-shau opening the door, as it were, to Feng-hsien, hence great alarm was entertained for that place.

On the 9th, we received a report that the Ping-hu and Cha-pû rebels put on the Imperial garb, and divided themselves into companies, numbering about 20 to a company. These, preceded by some cavalry, five of the chiefs belonging to which were blue buttons, proceeded to Chin-shan and stated that they had come to protect the place. No suspicions were entertained about them, and suddenly, upon a preconcerted signal, the whole of them collected themselves together, and, with the remainder who had lain in ambush outside the city, commenced the attack upon the city, the Imperialist troops of which not being able to copewith them, speedily wavered and the city was lost.

On the 10th a report arrived that Chin-shau and Chang-yen had fallen and that in consequence Hêng-hsien was in extreme danger. A reinforcement of 500 men under an aide-de-camp have proceeded to Nan-chiao (chen) to encamp there, and hold the road with a view of protecting Feng-hsien.

On the 11th we received news that on the 1st of the 8th moon the new Emperor ascended the throne, and in the T'ai-ho palace received obeisance and congratulations from an immense number of the high mandarins. Prince Kung (Yi-su) went through the ceremony of conferring the reigning title of Chi-hsiang on the new Emperor.
